Nov. 16, 2011

TOPEKA – Revenue Secretary Nick Jordan will be spending Thursday in southeast Kansas discussing economic development and tax policy.

During the morning, Jordan will attend a summit focused on boosting economic development in southeastern Kansas.

In the afternoon, he will travel to Pittsburg for a listening tour stop to solicit people's thoughts on Kansas' tax climate.

“Throughout this year, I've heard a lot of insightful input from people across Kansas, including during my recent stops in western Kansas and again when I spoke with the Lenexa Chamber in Johnson County last week,” Jordan said. “I'm looking forward to hearing people's comments from the southeast part of our state.”

The listening tour stop in Pittsburg is open to the public and will be:
